THE ABILITY OF COMMERCIAL NATIONS TO CARRY ON WAR .- While the spirit of war, says Hunt's MERCHANT'S MAGAZINE, is opposed to the spirit of commerce, we must not be understood to mean that commercial nations are on that account the less capable of carrying on war. Their indisposition to war arises not from want of courage, but from a peaceful disposition and a feeling of justice, They are not led away by a love of glory or a desire for revenge. They take a businesslike view of the question; they examine the debtor and the creditor side of the account, and calculate beforehand what they shall gain by fighting. But, when once compelled to draw the sword, commercial nations are fees not to be despised. Look at ancient Tyre, that for thirteen years resisted the power of Babylon, led on by Nebuehadnezzar; at new Tyre—a town built on a rock that for seven months arrested the power of Alexandra from the system, even when the limbs and bones are dreadfully swollen. not to be despised. Look at ancient Tyre. months arrested the progress of Alexander the Great: at Carthage, that for centuries contended with the armies of martial Rome; and come to modern history, and trace the wars of Venice and Geona, of Holland, and of England, and tell me if commercial nations have shown themselves deficient in that valor and enterprize which are the foundations of successful war. It is remarkable that the commercial city of Corinth supplied excellent

It should be the aim of young men to go into good society— we mean not the rich, nor the proud, the fashionable, but the society of the wise, the intelligent, and the good. When you find men who know more than you do, and from whose conversation you can gatter information, it is always safe to be found ther information, it is always safe to be found mit of ao dispute.

Very Respectfully Yours, L. C. GUNN. with them. It has broken down many a man to associate with the low and vulgar, where you wish to be wise and respected, if you desire happiness and not misery, we advise you to associate with the intelligent and good. Strive for excellence and strict integrity, and you will never be found in the sinks of pollution, or in the ranks of profligates and gamblers. Once habituate yourself to a virtuous course, once secure a love for good society, and no punishment would be greater than by accident to be obliged for a half a day to associate with the low and vulgar.

There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of man, as a good moral character. It is his wealth-his influence -his life. It dignifies him in every station -exalts him in every condition, and glorines him at every period of life. Such a character is more to be desired than everything else on earth. It makes a man free and independent. No servile tool-no erouching sycophant-no treacherous honor-seeker ever bore such a character. The pure joys of truth and righteonsness never spring in such a bosom. If young men but knew how much a good character would dignify and exalt them how glorious it would make their prospects, even in this life, never should we find them yielding to the grovelling and base-born passions of human nature.

AUTUMN. "The melancholy days have come, The saddest of the year"— and yet the most beautiful-for however bright and gay, and joyous, other seasons may be, there is a rare beauty in the dying away of the many hued vegetation, which makes a deep impression on the lover of God and nature, filling the heart with piety, and imparting to the season a glory surpassing far the grandeur of Spring. There is in fact, more heart in this season, than in all the others of the year, and it is justly calculated to turn the mind to the Supreme Beneficence which has made even decay and death so glorious; while as the once green leaves fall to the ground, we are reminded that man, too, cometh forth as a flower and is cut down-"that all flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of the grass." It is the figure of the down-hill of life, and even the silent falling of the leaf, speaks to us in the voice of HIM who "changeth the times and the seasons," telling of the approach of the autumn of life, and winter, and death, when the murmuring rills shall be stopped, and the

CONSUMPTION.

Consumption can be cuber.—Coughs, Catarth, Brunchitis, Spitting of Blood, Ashme, Difficult or profuse Expectoration, Heeric Flush, Night Sweats, Pain in the side Ar. have been cured, and can be with as much certainty as any other disease. A specific has long been sought for, but in vain until the discovery of Dr. Drake's Panacca. It is mild and saic but certain and efficatious in its operation, and cannot possibly injure the most delicate constitution. We would carnestly resommend those afflicted to give it a trial—and we believe they will not have occasion to regret it. The system is cleansed and strongthened, the ulcers on the longs are healed, and the patients gradually regain their usual health and strength. Read the following: CONSUMPTION.

mercial city of Corinth supplied excellent military commanders, insomuch that the other states of Greece preferred Corinthian generals to natives of their own states. May we not infer from this that the commercial virtues of foresight, calculation, diligence, arrangement, and perseverance, united to a knowledge of military tactics, laid the foundation of their success? But though commercial nations have been sometimes compelled to engage in war, and have generally waged it successfully, yet war is injurious to commerce.
